Criminal RECORDings

by Jason Pasquale
Editor-In-Chief
(with files from E. Henley)

Students are being told that they need to sign a document before they can tape in their geology courses.

Tim Warman is the course instructor who is insisting that his students sign a document promising that no one else will be able to use copies of the tapes. One of Warman's students explains, "That's because last year people were selling the tapes to people who were not showing up for class."

Warman also is insisting that students erase the tapes before the final examinations. One concern that Warman's students has raised is, "Does this mean he can tell us stuff in class and we will be marked wrong on the exam?"

Although Warman could not be reached for comment his supervisor

Professor Dyer could. Dyer stated that Warman was, "within his rights to restrict audio or visual recordings...What comes out of his mouth is his property."

Dyer is supported in this statement by the Scarborough Course Calendar, page 6, which states, "[students] must obtain the instructor's written consent beforehand. Otherwise all such reproduction is an infringement of copyright and is absolutely prohibited."

Lawyers consulted by other Canadian University Press papers earlier this year found that a legal opinion did not agree. Apparently, unless the instructor is reading directly from notes, copyright does not apply.

Further, under existing Canadian law, any one participant can tape everyone in a discussion. While course instructors usually dominate discussion it appears that UofT classes still fit the legal criterion of discussion.

Not Just Ears Anymore!!

Author's name has been withheld on request

Most people consider piercing their ear(s) at sometime during their lives. The procedure to accomplish this has been refined to such a point (pardon the pun) that it can usually be done in about five minutes at any hair or beauty salon.

There are a number of other types of piercings that have been sonewhat ignored in the past, but are now coming to the forefront of the cutting edge/ alternative fashion as a unique and personalized "lifestyle" statements.

The general rule is: "If youu can pinch it, you can pierce it!" From head to toe, it is possible to pierce almost any part of your body safely. Bellybuttons, nipples, lips, noses, cheeks, genitalia and even your tongue. With the exception of the eyelids, most parts of your body can accomodate multiple piercings.

There are many myths regarding body piercing, one of which is that "piercing reduces sensitivity." Au Contraire!!! If properly performed by a professional the pierced area(s) usually become more sensitive, even hypersensitive.

In general, when properly carried out, an alternative piercing can rate anywhere between a 2 and a 6 on a scale of 1 - 10, if you consider an ear piercing to be a 1.5.

Possibly one of the most personal ways to "accessorise" yourself today, body piercing has one basic rule: "Don't do it yourself!" It is important to ensure that anyone about to puncture your body is a trained professional using hygenic means.

SCSC may get Additional $264,625 from Students

SCSC claims that the new $30 levy they are spnsoring for the spring ballot is in response to a funding deficit for a new elevator in the R-Wing.

Vice-President of Finance Andrew MacDonald said, "there will be a few dollars left which we will spend as we see fit." As reported in the Newspaper, if the proposed levy passes SCSC will have an extra $264,625.00. This is roughly equivalent to increasing their budget by 50% for each of the upcoming 2 years.

SCSC backs down on "Super-Fuel" Deal

SCSC support of a new savings card for Scarborough students appears to be waning.

"It won't pass" said VP Finance MacDonald.

SCSC is supposed to vote on the issue today, having twice tabled the motion for two weeks so various council members can get more information. MacDonald indicated that the file on the matter could not be located last week.

The card allegedly offers savings on a wide variety of products and services but is primarily concerned with the sale of a new "super-fuel." Claims on the new fuel include that it is cleaner, more efficient and chaeper than contemporary measures.

Scarborough Campus is the only student organisation which has been approached to sponsor the card, according to a spokesperson on behalf of the card.

Get Your Body Condom

Sex is the issue, obviously for the Underground this week but also for the times.

The submission we received dealt with the act itself (or rather the atcs) as well as some of the social ramifications. Our inhouse pseudo-physician Dr. Underground helped out by covering contraceptives (though I doubt if he helped anyone out of an explosive situation). I think, however, that we may have been somewhat negligent on the potential disease ramifications.

Hopefully by now everyone is well informed on A.I.D.S., they know that it is transmitted via body fluids, which does not include kissing, water fountains or toilet seats.

The danger is that other things can be transmitted this way. Earlier this year a Scarborough student wrote to us about their concern that they received crabs on campus. While there is no way for us to verify this it could be true. Crabs are a lice-like parasite that will live on your body. They can be transmitted by sharing towels, borrowing clothes and via public washrooms.

The new disease that I fear most is Hepatitis B. While not normally fatal it is incurable, and it can be transmitted by kissing. The good news is that you can get innoculated by your physician. Three injections over a six month period and you can stop worrying about this one. The cost, however, is not covered by OHIP.

While far from a fashion statement genital warts are in this year in a big way. This vies with hepatitis B for the STD making the strongest comeback. Passed through genital contact these are somewhat unsightly and you should see your doctor.

Herpes is another perrenial favorite because is ranks up there with incurables. This one can be treated but will recur throughout your life, often in times of stress - sound good in University?

What would be a discussion on STDs without chlamydia and ghonnorhea? These two are also very common on the University campuses.

The danger with many of the STDs is that you often will not know if you have one. They rear their ugly heads later when you find out your infertile, your liver stops, you go blind, or you die. In the meantime the disease uses you to get to eveyone you sleep with (and so on, and so one,...)

Today, regardless of the form of birth control you use a condom is required. Some methods of birth control can even make you more susceptable to STDs. Protect yourself, and your partner.

Health Services provides a wealth of information and free condoms etcetra. Also, new seminars will be available shortly lead by fellow Scarborough students on request.

Blue Tones From Scarborough Concerts

To Whom It May Concern:

This campus is really lame. Why don't you guys get us students a live band or something. Someone happening like David Wilcox, Kim Mitchell or The Tragically Hip. Something you know you can't lose money on. Come on guys, wake up! If the community colleges can get good bands, why can't we? We had good live band pub nights before, why not now. Please look into this issue as I feel we are getting ripped off. I have been to a few college pub nights with Kim Mitchell, etc. and can't understand why we can't get similar activities. This campus bites!?!

Upcoming Events: Halloween

A part of my daily routine includes walking by the "UP-coming Events" sign located on the second floor in the R-Wing. What is the purpose of this; certainly not to inform us as to what events are "up-coming". January's "up-coming" event board included only "New Years Day" and a prompt to "Look here next month for up-coming events." What will February's "up-coming" events be? Perhaps "Valentines Day" or "Groundhog Day"; maybe both if the sign is feeling especially informative. December's events included only "Christmas Day", November's included "Remembrance Day", of course October's included "Halloween". If it weren't for the "Up-coming Events" sign, I'd be totally lost. These aren't events, they're days (usually days past by the time a new board is up).

Who is responsible for this thing? How much did it cost? Why not actually list an "up-coming" events instead of continually promising that they will appear next month? Maybe they'll all be listed at the end of the year? This may seem like a trivial grippe...I suppose it is. Could you look into this for me. Fuck that thing bugs me!

The Double Minority:

Comments from a Gay Black Student

by Anonymous
Underground Contributor

Here at Scarborough, the lesbian and gay population is a silent, (very silent) minority. But we are out there; in the classrooms, the cafeteria, the meeting place. Some of us know one another and call each other friends. Every so often we go out together to a club, to dinner or to the LGBOUT meetings downtown on Friday nights.

I am not going to make any long-winded plea for understanding because let's face it, you don't want to hear it and we are not trying to ram anything down your throat. Here is a bit of information for you, we do not understand why we are gay or lesbian either. It just happened. It happens. Even to me who was deeply religious at one point in my life (and I still am in my own way).

What I will say is that we, or more specifically I, refuse to feel like some sort of freak of nature. You are normal and in my own way, so am I. That was what I learned as I came out. After years of feeling guilty, I can finally feel good about myself again and lift my head up and feel proud to be me!

As I was growing up, I was what one might consider popular. I had a lot of friends and people knew me. I seemed quite happy with life. But from somewhere inside me came the realization that I was different in some way. Not only because I was a different colour from most of the other people around me, but because I realized, or more precisely admitted, that I was more attracted to members of my own sex. I was g--! Yeah, the dreaded "G" word. The type of person that my friends and I called "FAGS" or "QUEERS".

I never had a problem accepting my colour. I was and always will be very proud on my heritage. But in my culture, homosexuality is just not done. It was as I started coming out that I began to withdraw more and more from my own culture. Not because I was ashamed of it, as one friend once accused me of, but because I was afraid of being rejected by it. This was not an easy thing to do because I love my people. Yet I became the "silent member". Too afraid of being looked down upon by my people because of my sexuality.

As I entered the gay community I began to feel more accepting of my sexual orientation. Then one day as I was sitting down with my friends, I noticed that a white male who was also gay was giving me the "What are you doing here?" look. I had seen that look before on someone who is prejudiced so I just didn't pay any attention to his ignorance. Nevertheless his look forced me to acknowledge something that I knew all along -- I am a minority within a minority.

That took even more getting used to than my initial coming out: to realize that in some places you are an outsider no matter how much right you have to be there. Some people try to take away my right to feel proud of my heritage and of my sexuality. I am not ashamed of either. And along with learning how to cope with the minority within a minority aspect of my life, I learned that both these labels are only a part of me. They do not totally define me. Take me as a whole person and try to see behind the tags to see the complete me.

When I said before that I was not going to make any long-winded plea for understanding, what I meant was that I don't have to prove the right of my existence to anyone. I am here and I will live the gift of life that was given me. You can either accept me and be my friend or if you can not then you just continue to live your life and I will live mine. All I will ask is that you respect me, for my colour and my orientation.

A friend asked me if I was going to sign my real name to this article and I told him no. The people who are close to me already know that I am gay. But for everyone else, it is not an issue for them to be concerned with. When I deal with the people that I see everyday, my sexuality is not a factor that affects the work I do or the friendships that I make.

As to all the people out there who are gay or lesbian, or thinking about it, even though you may not believe it, there are others at Scarborough Campus. If you want to meet other Scarberians, why not come to the LGBOUT meetings some times? Hey, what have you got to lose except your own isolation?

LGBOUT meets every Friday night downtown

The Goal of a Lifetime: The Strive for the First Time

by Pamela Truckle
Underground Contributor

"I think I've finally figured it out," Chris said, "I turn girls off because I'm too nice. I should be more of an asshole. Am I right?" This is just one example of our many conversations between chris and I concerning his lack of sex. Chris is a 23 year old virgin whom I've known for the past 3 years and have been able to discuss any sexual matter with, including his lack of sexual experience. Chris is not ugly, overweight, nerdy or shy as one might stereotype a virgin to be. In fact, he is good looking, talkative, and quite generous. So why hasn't he been able to find a sexual partner? He feels that it has a lot to do with insecurity. "You have to be able to start a conversation with a girl, but the fear of rejection is more pronounced than usual because there is no knowledge or experience to back you up."

Many male virgins (who I will refer to as M.V.'s) feel the pressure from society to lose their virginity at the earliest age possible, then get laid as often as possible afterward. For instance, Chris says, "last weekend I was drinking with a bunch of buddies who were commenting on how long it had been since they last got laid. A girl asked how long it had been for me. I told her the truth and said I've never had sex. She didn't believe me and had to confirm it with my friends. She definitely looked surprised when she learned it was true."

Some M.V.'s feel they have to do it "just once" to retrieve some of their lost self esteem or to succeed in other areas of their life. Derek, a 20 year old M.V.'s says, "I have made getting laid such a high priority that I don't focus on things like school, my job or other interests. Having sex is all that matters. Lately I've been able to put things in prospective, but it's always there in the back of my mind."

The fact that being a virgin can play a big role in other areas of one's life may seem surprising. Afterall, what do the intimate moments of sex have to do with an essay for English literature, or a part time job? However, when it's all one can think of, it can play the same role as any other insecurity such as a weight problem or balding. Although none of these are related, there is a feeling of a hole that has to be filled (no pun intended). Many may think this is all blown out of proportion, but with a society that focuses so much on sex - from advertising to movies to books - we are apt to believe that sex is a big deal, especially to males who are socially conditioned to get sex whenever possible. To someone who hasn't been able to experience intercourse, living with only the rumours can get disheartening.

Another source of pressure is from friends, the most harmful ones being those who "Kiss and Tell" without sparing any details, and believes a bot becomes a man only when he gets laid. They are the ones who have to worry about receiving and transmitting STDs, which is something an M.V. does not have to worry about (they are also spared the nightmare of waiting for the results of an AIDS test).

Apart from being STD free, M.V.'s may have a more memorable first experience of intercourse than most people who lost their virginity at an early age. Afterall, how much can one know at age 13 or 14 concerning the different sexual positions, as well as sexual techniques (fellatio, cunnilingus). Most people recall "just laying there" or barely moving when they think of the first time they had sex. But M.V.'s, although not experienced, have had years to listen and learn facts, rumours, new techniques, what girls do and don't like, and different and more enjoyable methods of safer sex.

Naturally, all M.V's do not have low self-esteem or lack of success in other areas of their life. Some are proud to have remained a virgin as is honourable and respectable. Whatever their reasons are, whether it be a lack of luck in the love department, setting standards high, or a desire to remain abstinent until their wedding night.

So why am I writing this article if it's their business and no one else's. Maybe its because I've seen the persecution? Chris and other M.V.'s have gone through from their friends. Maybe its because I've seen the frustrations, experienced the tears, and tried to rebuild the self-esteem lost in my closest friend. Or maybe its because I want to extend a personal pat on the back to all our fellow M.V.'s and hope that when they do loss their virginity it will be all and more then they thought it would be.

STRANGERS

Watching the rhythm of the silhouette dancing on the wall.
The shadows hiding the magic I promised you.

I stared at the flush of your naked skin,
Spread over the bed and the sheets.
Anxiety stopped me. But I, I still went on,
with all my senses lost.
All I could do is feel the touch on my lips,
The wet on my head and in the wind.
Our tumescent bodies under the fiery sky.
My heart grew quicker. My blood pressure rose.
As I reached the resolution phase,
Like an ocean of light my impending climax thrushed.
I gazed at you with evil eyes,
You peered at me – We looked like strangers.
Your flaring nostrils and rigid neck,
Your arched back and tense thighs,
You shimmered in my dark place,
What a unique phenomenon.
Now back to our platue.
Back to our prestimulated condition.
Take a look around – we were so impassioned.

Do The Children Ever Forget

by Anonymous
Underground Contributor

I am a survivor of child sexual abuse. My family was the average, typical Canadian family, on the outside. On the inside, it resembled more of a concentration camp than a home and my father was the only commander.

When I was eleven years old I told my mother and the police what my daddy was doing to me, I thought I could make it stop.

I want this to help provide some answers to people - those being abused, those doing the abusing and those who see/hear about it and want to help. Somewhere out there, there's got to be something that can put a stop to this once and for all. Ignoring it will not make it go away, maybe acknowledging it will.

Nobody did anything for me or my family - nobody asked if we were OK., nobody cared. We were all told in someway to forget about it and go on with our life. How could we go on - this was our life. I didn't understand what was going on and no one took the time to explain it. So, here I am now ten years asking why. Someone obviously didn't think it was important; they didn't have the time or the patience to care about what the future would hold. I was only a child; one who would grow up and forget those awful things that Daddy said and did.

Unfortunately, it doesn't happen that way. Sure we grow up but we don't forget. We end up in lousy relationships or even no relationships. We may abuse our children or we may be afraid to have any. Afraid of doing to another what was done to us.

It may be happening everywhere but that doesn't make it unimportant or less devastating. The person that you trust the most in the world violates you and destroys that trust. As a child, you are confused and afraid but late, as an adult, that confusion turns to anger and hatred.

I lived with the hate that I had for my father for ten years. I couldn't remember anything positive or even feeling and love because I was so full of hate. Then one day my sister told me that he was dead. At first I thought that all the pain would die with him but then I realized that I still had so many questions I needed answers to and no one to answer them.

That's when my search began. I searched for answers to thousands of unanswered questions. I didn't feel the hate any longer because there was no one left to hate. Suddenly, there was a void and I wanted to know why I grew up without a father. What happened? I needed to know if he was always like that or if something had happened to make him be this way. I wanted to know why my father hated me - hated me enough to take away my childhood from me. This was the man that I loved for no other reason than because he was my father. It was a total, unconditional, innocent love that could never be replaced. I couldn't understand how he could have that and then throw it all away.

Where am I now? I am a student at the University of Toronto. A face in the crowd that you see everyday; but, you will not recognize me because I look like everyone else.

Let's Be Reasonable, Folks

by Brent Miles
Underground Contributor

"What they do in private is their own concern, but they shouldn't force their lifestyle on us." We've heard comments like this often enough to know that what is under discussion is 'out' lesbians and gays. Those of us who are out, and who support anti-homophobia curriculum in schools, are said to inflict our ways on others. "Why do they flaunt 'it'?" If the generous reader will allow, I would like to vindicate those individuals who are open about their sexuality. Too often, being honest about one's sexuality is contemptuously called 'flaunting'. This notion will persist so long as some people consider a queer person's simple existence to be a provocation.

I exist, and thank goodness. Having spent many years in the closet, I know that the denial of existence isn't much fun. The alternative to being 'in the closet' is of course being 'out', which we have already seen is tantamount to flaunting one's sexuality. So be it! Don't be just 'out', be positively annoying if you must! It's been my experience that many people lose their homophobia when they learn their friend, their co-worker, their brother, son, sister or daughter, is queer.

Homophobia is not just societal. It can be internal, too. It's actually one and the same. Internalized homophobia is the more unreasonable because it makes a victim of self. Fortunately, as being 'out' is becoming more fashionable, this species of self-hatred is on the way to becoming extinct.

Homophobia is surely curable through reason. The hatred we so often see is, after all, irrational. Hatred always is. . Of course, lesbians and gays hardly need to justify themselves to the straight world by means of rational argument. Homosexuality requires no more justification than heterosexuality. We justify ourselves by being 'out' and by being unrepentantly well-adjusted. Heterosexuals choose to be out, heterosexuals choose to flaunt their sexuality at every turn. There's no reasonable argument why lesbians and gays shouldn't do the same.

The next time you see two people of the same gender holding hands, ask yourself whether it is reasonable to say these people are parading themselves. Would it be reasonable to say two heterosexuals were parading themselves by holding hands? The reasonable answer is no.

Most importantly, let's ask ourselves whether any form of self-hatred is reasonable. Is it reasonable to fear 'flaunting' yourself in telling friends and family who you are? Recall the last time you heard a heterosexual casually mention their boyfriend or girlfriend. They didn't have to fear criticism for making the mention; they didn't have to fear they were parading their sexuality; they didn't have to fear anything. Surely, neither do any of us.

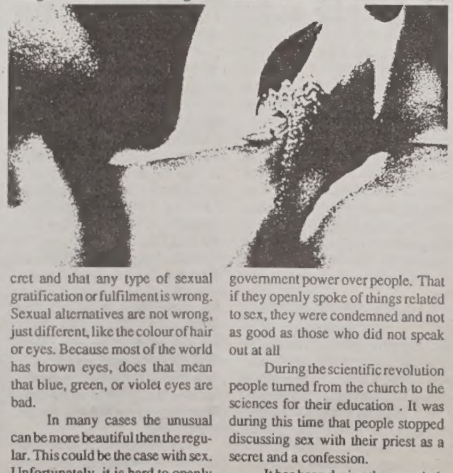
A Brief History of Sex

by Michelle Cloke
Underground Contributor

Let's talk about SEX. Actually sexuality to be more precise. Do you have a problem with that. Do you have a problem or a moral objection to this paper openly printing articles about sexual practices not blazed across a movie screen or what the majority of society claim to practice . If you do you shouldn't and if you don't, good as long as your reading for the right reasons; that is, to learn not to laugh.

Sex, sexuality, sexual preferences are all very natural things to talk about and shouldn't be damned or oppressed as they have been for many centuries.

How did we come to believe though that sex was some big secret and that any type of sexual gratification or fulfilment is wrong. Sexual alternatives are not wrong, just different, like the colour of hair or eyes. Because most of the world has brown eyes, does that mean that blue, green, or violet eyes are bad.



In many cases the unusual can be more beautiful then the regular. This could be the case with sex. Unfortunately, it is hard to openly discuss this and find out if it is or is not because of developed taboos about the subject.

During the seventeenth centuries the restrained, mute, and critical attitude we hold today did not exist. Back then people were openly able to discuss the topic in public. Able to make gestures and crude innuendo's without anyone ever thinking twice.

It was not until the Victorian Era that the constrained, quiet, censored attitude developed towards sex. Nobody is quite sure why this happened. When capitalism grew, sex became bad. What made society negate sex as a bad thing when it is really a very positive thing.

The censorship, denial, and defense in society about sex had one noticeable advantage, it gave authorities such as the church and the government power over people. That if they openly spoke of things related to sex, they were condemned and not as good as those who did not speak out at all

During the scientific revolution people turned from the church to the sciences for their education . It was during this time that people stopped discussing sex with their priest as a secret and a confession.

It has been during the twentieth century that people have begun to treat sex as a science. Now we turn to psychiatrist about our sexuality. Which is probably better because sex is not a moral issue. It is a physical issue. It involves our bodies and our minds, not theories on paper. Everyone is different - you can't have one generalized rule as a norm for sex.

Today in many ways we are breaking away from these taboos. Sex in the movies, in music, in books is very common. What's a movie if there isn't a good sex scene, right.

Harlequin romances are big sellers at the drug store. Sex is being more openly discussed with one problem. We have put limitations on what is normal and labelled areas which are not.

Sexuality has become less and less of a taboo as the twentieth century has progressed. Marilyn Monroe, Rita Hayward, "the sex symbols", and the free love of the sixties all opened the doors we now freely walk through.

Why then can we not as a society accept and openly discuss alternative sexual practices.

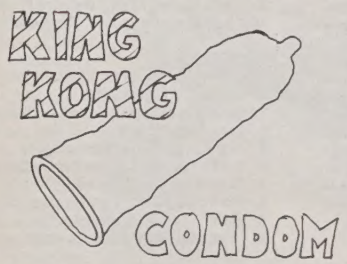
Sexuality as a part of each of us. You may be an overtly sexual person, you may have different stimulation in bed then your best friend but you are both normal. Having fetishes, preferring the same sex, preferring the opposite sex, or anything that the people around you may not, isn't wrong.

Freud once suggested that it was not until we labelled different sexual practices that some became bad and some became good. Therefore, if these practices were made bad then, we can start to make them just part of the norm again.

Dr. Underground: Calling For Contraceptives

by Ari Robicsek
Underground Columnist

Good morning ladies and gentlemen, allow me to welcome you very warmly to Ask Dr. Underground Anything Specifically Related to Contraceptives, a new talk show in which I, Dr. Underground, graciously and good-humouredly answer anything at all you may want to know about sex. My editor thought it would be good for my public relations if I opened myself up to your honest, unprompted and genuine concerns about your sexual practices. And I, being the amicable and erudite columnist that I am, will be more than pleased to share my extensive knowledge with you.



Incidentally, I have recently been reading up on contraceptive techniques, so although, as I have mentioned, I am exceedingly well versed in all aspects of the crucial medical field of sexuality, why don't you, um, sort of try to concentrate you questions in that direction.

Alright?

So with that in mind, lets go to our first caller, Amy, from Kingston, Ontario.

Hello Amy, what van I do for you?

Well, uh, hi Dr. Underground, I love your column.

Thank you very much Amy. NO need to be so formal. You can just call me Dr.

Uh, OK. Well I've been, like, having these problems with my boyfriend, like, and..

Trying to decide which form of contraceptive is the best for you? Well let me tell you about a wife range of possibilities that..

Well actually, sir, it's not quite that. You see, he thought that we, uh, had reached the point in our relationship when we should begin to get more intimate..... you know what I mean, like, and ,well, I felt really uncomfortable, and I ...

Yes, you lean towards abstinence. Well let me tell you that abstinence is the most effective form of contraception. In fact, the majority of scientists feel that the success rate of this method is almost one-hundred percent. Which, I might add, is considerably higher than the prevention rate sported by vaginal sponges. In fact, the vaginal sponge...

Actually, we broke up, and I...

want desperately to hear what else I have to say about vaginal sponges. Well than, their pregnancy prevention rate is about 73-84 percent...not particularly good. People are inclined to use them, however, because they are easy to use. They contain spermicide inside them which can still be effective twenty-four hours after the sponge is inserted deep into the ...

Please, Doctor, I'm very distressed and I need help...

vaginal canal. The sponge, of course, does have its disadvantages...

And I have a gun. I really need help. After he left me I became quasi-suicidal and ate twenty-four McDonalds Happy Meals in an attempt to cheer up, and when that didn't work I joined a satanic cult and spent three months killing small rodents with Ginsu Knives until I finally snapped and went after my neighbour's cat Muffy, while wearing nothing but Speedo goggles and an awful perfume that I got in the mail and now I have a gun and I have covered my house in plastic explosives and I think I am going to end it all now unless I get some help soon.

Uh Huh. (In columnist school they told us there would be days like this). Well, as the great Oliver Cromwell once remarked, it is never too late for proper education. (Whenever you want to say something and make it sound respectable, attribute it to Cromwell. Nobody knows who he was, but he sounds respectable). Which is why I take this opportunity to inform you that the disadvantages of using sponges include the fact that they may be difficult to remove, or may cause irritation of the vaginal lining. Oh my, we have another caller, doubtlessly eager to ask some penetrating question about condoms.

Hello caller.

Hi Dr. U. You wrote a column a few weeks ago about back pain and I know I need more exercise to get rid of my pain but I live on the thirteenth floor of a condominium and I can't really use the treadmill I bought because the people next door complain about...

Did I hear you say condoms, son?

Uh, no sir, I think I must have said condominium, because I live, you see, in...

Whatever. I thought I heard you say condom. Well let me tell you that the condom, one of the most heavily advertised contraceptives, protects against a number of STDs, including AIDS and herpes. (of course its effectiveness in AIDS prevention is presently being questioned). But let me warm you that it is ineffective one in ten times, and it may break. Thank you for you question.

But....

Our next caller is from Orillia, home of the Anacin poll and a population of 30 thousand who wonder why they are known for being in and Anacin poll. Isn't that right, caller?

Well gee...uh...well... no. I was actually calling to find out your opinion on the risks of having breast implants.

Ah, a fine question. Well, although implants have been implicated in triggering auto-immune disease and other unpleasant things, no researchers have connected them with nausea, fluid retention, blood clots, hypertension and irregular bleeding. But do you know what has been found to cause these?

Uh....no.

Birth control pills. And although they may have unpleasant side-effects, they are the most effective reversible contraceptive, with a 90-96 percent prevention rate. They also protect against some forms of cancer, pelvic inflammatory, fibrocystic breast disease and benign ovarian cysts.

Hi, Dr. Underground, I've been wondering...

Next caller.

Hello, is this Pizza Palace?

Sorry sir, wrong number. But would you like to know about diaphrams?

Uh, sure.

Well sir, diaphrams, with spemicide, have an 80-90 percent effectiveness rate, and have few side effects. Many people find useful the fact that they can be inserted up to two hours before intercourse.

Great, Is this part of your two-for-one deal?

Next caller.

Let me guess- you want to know what IUD's are.

Everywhere you go you hear people saying IUD, IUD. Well, you've phoned the right columnist. An IUD (intrauterine device) is a very effective means of contraception, which once instead, usually stays in place. You may want to consider all your options before you have one inserted, though, because they do increase the risk of certain diseases.

Oh dear, my time is up. Well, see you next week when the Underground runs the special Ask Dr. Underground Anything Specifically Related to Monocleosis in the Pygmy People of Nairobi.

TORONTO CATCHES THE SPIRIT - Of The West

by Shabira Tamachi
Underground Contributor

Wednesday, February 3 proved to be a night of much excitement and energy. The Music Hall was packed with screaming, anxious fans waiting for the appearance of Spirit of the West. The Vancouver born group is currently on a 10 date Canadian tour. Titled The Hollow Bodies Tour, the show features a more acoustic sound with new material as well as material from the band's last 5 records.

Introduced as a band with a grunge-acoustic sound, the crowd got what they wanted as the band members finally floated out on to the stage. The Music Hall provided excellent acoustics for the band who started the show off with a bang. Featuring songs such as the famous Political to Spot the Difference group members also related a few stories that lay behind some of their tunes. Bone Contention they claimed was written for Pee Wee Herman and when a fan cried out "Who's Frank?" (Pertaining to Ship Named Frank) their response was that Frank was a ship. Dedicating Goodbye Grace to all females, the group gained much support in the form of clapping, screaming and lots o' ya-hoo-ing.

Spirit of the West are Jon Mann-acoustic guitar and vocals, Geoffrey Kelly-acoustic guitar, flute and vocals, Hugh McMillan-mandolin, bass, electric guitar and 12 string, Linda McRae-accordion and bass and Vince Ditrich on drums. Yes, they certainly are a versatile band.

Just when the fans thought the band was walking off for a break in their set, they found Vince and Hugh (on the mandolin) remaining on the stage. Vince came out from behind his drum set to sing a truly amazing and classic version of Amore. The crowd displayed pleasure in some more screaming upon hearing "When the moon hits your eye..."

Joking that he "smelled Teen Spirit...of the West in the air" (obviously acknowledging the attendance of the many screaming teen fans) Jon Mann and the rest of the group put on great performance. The concert ended in a double encore with Scour the House as the final tune of the night. Full of energy and lots o' spirit, Spirit of the West proved themselves worthy to see. If you enjoy their music, you'll most definitely enjoy the show.

PETER WILD OPENS SUNDANCE COUNTRY BAR

by Richard Baker
Underground Contributor

Country is coming to Toronto. Yes, however hideous (or appealing) this may sound to you, the biggest thing in the States right now is invading Canada with six-guns blazing. Thursday February the 4th was the sight of this proliferation of pop. A new country club named "Sundance" opened amidst a flurry of free drinks with Peter Wild performing. This event also boasted the Canadian premiere of Melanie Greenwood who is accountable for the "Achy Breaky Heart" dance. Of course this was responsible for having the song played quite a number of times in the evening which watching the contestants couldn't quite make up for.

Upscale pop country. It is quite strange seeing dress country "duds" and a pastoral bar decor which seems to epitomize a city slicker image and not a downhome country one. What has become of country? Peter Wild is an excellent example of this. He was upbeat, danceable, professional and totally entertaining. He was the attraction of the evening and deserved to be but... well let me make an example. The song "Blue Moon of Kentucky" is an old song that Elvis (who some claim as the King of country as well) covered during the famous sun sessions. Now Peter started the song in a vein quite similar to this but then augmented it from there. The rhythm was different and the solo must have been from rule #3 in the country music writing textbook. But who am I to comment? Everyone got in to his very tight show and he performed quite well.

Peter could be called Canada's answer to Billy Ray. He judges his set by the crowd reaction and has a range to his songs. However, everything he does fits well into the country genre. He was born in Brantford, Ont. and spent his childhood trying to be the centre of attention, a trend which he continues to this day. He is very friendly and gets help from his parents. He has opened for many, Billy Ray most notably, but bemoans that the Canadian market is nowhere near the size of the States. With this country boom he is in the perfect position to benefit, so expect to hear a lot more from him in the future.

Sharks! Invade ROM

by Christine Durant
Underground Contributor

More pigs have killed people than sharks

That's right! The Royal Ontario Museum's Sharks! Fact and Fantasy exhibit started February 6 and is running through May 2. Organized by the Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County, the show makes its first Canadian stop at the ROM.

It is a comprehensive exhibit displaying the truth about sharks. There are almost one hundred interactive and informative displays such as life-size models, live specimens, fossils, diving equipment and Gary Larson cartoons, which change shark myths and attitudes by providing accurate information.

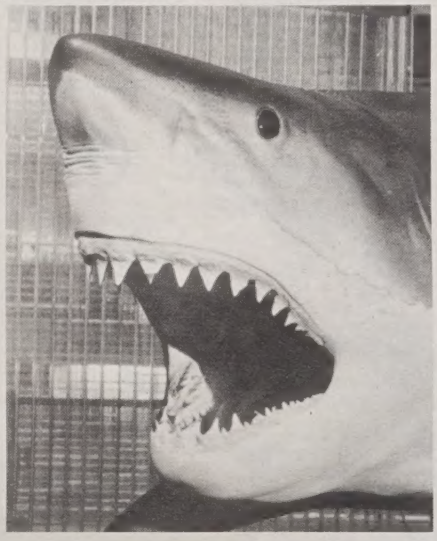
The exhibit far exceeded my expectations. I had expected a couple of rooms full of fossils and interesting information. What I got was new knowledge, my misconceptions gave way to the many interactive displays to play with.

Sharks! opens with an adventure across the ocean floor, in shadows and underwater noises. You are greeted by seventeen different types of sharks swimming through their environment. Some of these life size models are the long white shark measuring six metres, the scallop, hammerhead and the rare megamouth along with the tiny pygmy shark (25 cm long).

Leaving the ocean floor, visitors learn of shark anatomy and behaviour, not to mention shark evolution, size, teeth, breathing and diet. Some articles that have been found in the stomachs of sharks include a seventeenth century suit of armour, and a bottle of champagne.

The final part of the exhibition, "Sharks and Us" looks at human interaction with sharks. Visitors see how different cultures represent sharks in legend, literature, advertising and art. Sharks kill 25 people worldwide each year while people kill more than 100 million sharks in the same period through commercial sport fishing. The exhibition raises public awareness and the possibility of sharks becoming an endangered species.

The exhibit is a worthwhile endeavour for people of every age. The material presented was fascinating. Anyone with an interest in sharks, or just looking to spend a few hours perusing the ROM, will find Sharks! Fact and Fantasy quite enjoyable. Check it out!



GetLoaded

by Jason Pasquale
Editor-in-Chief

Loaded Weapon 1 seems to be Emilio Esteves' answer to his big brothers' (Charlie Sheen) Hotshots. Brother Charlie helps out by appearing in a cameo parody of his own No Man's Land.

Loaded Weapon is packed with hilarious spoofs of a slew of action movies, including Silence of the Lambs, Basic Instinct, Die Hard, all the Lethal Weapons, and the Naked Gun series. Jean Claude Van Damme and Arnold Schwartznegger receive dubious commentary as their styles are parodied throughout the film. Anyone was ever involved in an action movie or series can be found here. The cast list reads like a who's who of Hollywood.

The first half hour is a scream. The next hour you smile and chuckle throughout. The ending moments of the film, however, leave you feeling almost obliged to continue smiling. Loaded Weapon 1 follows in the tradition of Airplane and Top Secret. The humour of the earlier parody movies, however, built throughout. Loaded Weapon 1 is funny, but is no better in the last thirty minutes than in the first, which does leave a feeling that something is lacking.

Credit should be given because the clips in the commercial advertisements do not ruin the movie. If you have not seen the recent adventure films you will not follow most of the situational humour and your money will be better spent renting the videos of what you missed. For any adventure movie buff, or an parody freak, Loaded Weapon 1 is a must see.

The Vanishing Opinion

by Megan Carruthers
Underground Contributor

Another average day but you would have thought that you had stepped into the Twilight Zone. Had I vanished no one would have realized that I wasn't there to begin with. That's how I felt walking into the Press Screening of The Vanishing. This isn't surprising considering that it was my first one and how else but invisible would your typical University student feel surrounded by all sorts of people who know more about movies than you do and watch movies at 10:30 am for a living and then write about it. Only normal to feel like not only do you want to be invisible (especially after no one laughed at my "Hi, I'm Brown from the Sun..." joke.)

The Vanishing, directed by George Sluizer, juxtaposes the points of view of the two main characters. Our protagonist, Barney Cousins, a chemistry Prof. and psychopathic abductor, played by Jeff Bridges. The beginning of the movie has Barney experimenting with chloroform on himself timing how long it takes to take effect. Conversely, we get to see the happy life of our hero, Jeff Harriman (Kiefer Sutherland) with the future victim, his girlfriend Diane Shaver (who's name ironically made into an anagram spells 'Are Vanished'- hence the title).

Flash forward three years after the abduction, Harriman is obsessed with finding her because he "just wants to know what happened to her." The theme of the "Quest for knowledge but at what cost" seems to recur. This is especially evident in that Harriman is left wondering what exactly happened to his girlfriend. At some point, Harriman's obsessiveness loses credibility as well as the audience's sympathy. Ironically, when at last there is a confrontation between the two characters, Barney raises an interesting point which is that Jeff has been searching for Diane for so long that he has lost his identity and he is afraid to know the complete truth because that would end his search. Thus leaving him with nothing and with no knowledge of his self.

As for Barney, it would have been nice to really hate him. Although the Cousins character is creepy, he comes across as being to some degree more human than Harriman.

Nancy Travis did a convincing job playing the jealous new girlfriend of Sutherland's character. Rumour has it though that her part was supposed to be played by Sutherland's ex-girlfriend Julia Roberts. Traditional techniques for building suspense, such as close-ups of intimate objects and body parts are relied on too much making the film longer than necessary and too predictable.

The Vanishing is not unlike any other movie that involves the disapperance of a person. Unfortunately, this was done to such a degree that I was left with very little feeling about the film at all and with even less of an opinion on how good it is. Don't expect to be shocked or surprised or see anything you haven't seen before and you may enjoy it for what it is.

Wild Tiger Eats At The Zoo

777-WILD! What's that? It's the number for one of the most rude, raunchy and WILD nightclubs in this city of the Great Phallus: the ZOO BAR at 256 Queen street West. like all the funktastic clubs, getting past Goliath at the door is half the fun and if you value your life, leave your acidwash, baseball cap and sneakers far in the bowels of your closet. As far as attitude goes, it simply doesn't. So who gets past customs? Anybody who wants to let LOOSE in an atmosphere of sophisticated decadence.

What's the deal, you ask? Picture this, as you ascend the stairwell and emerge from the vestibule into the lounge, you see to your immediate left, the Powder Room complete with curtains, chandeliers, wall to wall mirror and tattoo parlour. That's right, $2-15 gets you the Happy-tat of your choice anywhere you want. Directly in front are the pools. You can purchase the beverage of your choice (at standard club prices) and enjoy the wildlife from your plush armchair and wobbly table.

A walk through the jungle curtains et voila the dance zone. Pour les gens sauvages, there are the cages, there are also these absolutely orgasmic booths, the Casbahs where you, you and ? can study the laws of friction (remember to close the curtains). Across the floor is the VIP lounge wherein you may find Voula, Maxwell and of course John, I.P.M. (International Party Man). To join them for champagne, you will need to present proper documentation (VIP card) or an invitation will suffice.

The floor itself is equipped with Canada's only Tiger Scan lighting system, the divine sound (at one point so divine that the speaker's couldn't handle it) and Tiger Scan system induce one hell of a trip. Speaking of hell, there is NO TECHNO at the ZOO. Security discovered that it left the animals in a state of stupor. Besides that DJ Mikey likes anything that packs the floor, the open dance floor did feel spacy at times but was compensated for by the fog.

A serious word should be said here about security. The safety team is apparently highly trained in club warfare and how to avoid it. For one thing, they don't smile so don't even try to pull an "I can make you move" routine on these people cause they will fuck you over.

In case you're wondering of new and wonderfully sinful ways to have fun, Thursday nights are for the Womyn of Toronto. LOLA'S CABANA features bed arena dancers and beats spun by DJ Joy. Fridays and Saturdays are mixed and Sundays are BIG BOY Sundays for men who are men in every way. In the works are a visit by LADY BUNNY, a LEATHER BALL and an 8000 sq. ft. patio (the largest on Queen West).

The ZOO BAR is not for the meek and definitely detrimental to all you anal retentives out there! My recommendation to everybody else, CHECK IT OUT.

Top Ten Reasons the Campbell Conference got Waled 16-6 in the All-Star Game

10.) Toronto was playing in the Campbell division.

9.) The Campbell conference thought they were at a figure-skating tournament.

8.) Defensemen? Whaddya mean we were supposed to send defensemen?

7.) The All-Star game was designed to shatter the psyche of all would-be NHL netminders.

6.) What would hockey be without the occasional slaughter?

5.) The Campbell Conference All-Star reps were trying to make the Buffalo Bills feel better.

4.) The league commissioner is conducting a personal study on suicidal tendancies in professional goalies.

3.) Its not supposed to be a typical NHL game.

2.) Winners only got golf clubs; the losers got the Ice Capades.

1.) The only way to get a game this dismal in the books was to set a record bad score.

The Scarborough Blades recovered from their recent loss with a sterling defeat of the Meds "A" (a team with a record showing no losses) womens' ice hockey team.

Scarborough offense was forced to earn the two goals that brought the Scarborough Blades season record to 9-1-0. The goals, both of which were hard-fought, were brought in by team captain Kim Bevan and centre Danielle Cannata. The offense, while missing Cynthia (#10) Bishop, was also comprised of wingers Bev Mercer, Nicolle Russelle, Lisa Tkachuk, Betty "Berube" Ferreira, Lisa "F!rosh" Teillet and former defenseman Trish Duncan.

The Scarborough has an unbeatable defensive line-up comprised of regulars Jennifer (#18) Stanford, Wendy (17) Lodwick, Shannon (whom no one gets past) Meek and sometime forward Deb "relax" Lucas.

This decisive victory puts Scarborough into the tier "A" division for the play-offs, while concluding a season of good hockey on a particularly strong note.

This high-energy, high action game is only the promise of more to come; so be sure to cheer on the Blade Babes through their next semi-final game"

In Foul Territory

Over the past few weeks, the head suits of the NHL have been tossing around many hockey teams in their quest for realignment. For Leaf fans this means Toronto and Montreal could be in the same division. Building up rivalries and grouping teams according to geographic location is what it is all about. The best way to create interest and put fans in the seats is to have rivalries such as Montreal and Toronto, Edmonton and Calgary, and Quebec and Montreal. Cutting down on travel time by having teams in regional divisions makes teams less fatigued and more prepared to play on those road trips. Having regional divisions gives them more identity, something that has been lacking with the current system. For example, putting the Leafs in the Adams division and then renaming it the 'Northeast division' makes more sense because all the teams are in the northeast. The name 'Adams' does not say anything about the division itself. Look at other pro leagues like the NFL and NBA (I won't use baseball as an example because they still think Atlanta is a west division team), they have teams in regional divisions. The NHL should do it. Here is my solution for NHL realignment:

EAST DIVISION: Formerly the Patrick division. Washington Capitals That's right. Leave it alone. New York Rangers If it ain't broke, don't fix it. Philadelphia Flyers Pittsburgh Penguins New York Islanders New Jersey Devils

NORTHEAST DIVISION: Formerly the Adams division. Boston Bruins Keep all the current teams in but Buffalo Sabres just add Toronto to it. There should Montreal Canadiens be some good Leafs—Sabres and Leafs—¬ Quebec Nordiques Bruins rivalries to go with the Leafs Ottawa Senators—Canadiens tilts. Hartford Whalers (Hamilton?) Toronto Maple Leafs

WEST DIVISION: Formerly the Smythe division. Vancouver Canuck stake out the Winnipeg Jets and add Edmonton Oilers the Anaheim expansion team. Between Calgary Flames San Jose, Anaheim and Edmonton, look Los Angeles Kings for this to be a weak division for San Jose Sharks many years. Anaheim (Not the Ducks)

CENTRAL DIVISION: Formerly the Norris division. Chicago Blackhawks Add the Winnipeg Jets from the Smythe, Detroit Red Wings add the expansion Miami franchise Minnesota North Stars and take out Toronto. Leaf fans will miss St. Louis Blues the Detoit and Chicago bouts, but the Leafs can pound on Ottawa instead of Tampa Bay Lightning eight times a year.

IS THERE A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE?...Right about the same time Penguins' star Mario Lemieux was diagnosed with Hodgkin's disease, goalie Tom Barrasso was diagnosed as having the chicken pox. Then a few days later Barrasso was told he didn't have it. A few days after he was once a again diagnosed with the chicken-pox. Not only did it delay Mario's treatment, it also caused confusion for Barrasso. What kind of team doctors are working there? Hey doc, how does this sound? You're fired. No wait, come back. No, really, you're fired.

MOVIN' ON UP...The lowly Ottawa Senators are no longer last overall. When the Senators beat the Oilers last Wednesday, they moved ahead of the Sharks. Look for the Sharks and Senators to 'fight' for the cellar and the right to pick first in the '93 entry draft.

OTHER HOCKEY NOTES...The Penguins are 6—5—1 since Mario left...the Sharks are winless in their last 18 games...Sabres' star Alexander Mogilny scored his 50th goal last Wednesday against the Whalers in only his 46th game...the Leafs are 0—1—8 in overtime this season...the Penguins are 15—5—2 in their division, the next best in the Patrick are the Islanders at 12—11—2.

WHATCHA SAY SUCKAH'?..."The Brazilian judge did not make an error (in punching an 8 instead of a 9) in judgement; it was only after she found out who she was judging that she said she made an error."—Kristen Babb—Sprague, the American gold medal winner in synchronized swimming in the '92 summer games, responding on the question of whether Canadian Sylvie Frichette was robbed of a gold medal in the event.

Top Ten things Lacrosse & Valentines Day have in Common

10.) Both are an unfortunate national pastime.

9.) Because you know that in the locker room everyone brags about who scored what.

8.) After you play the field you're usually ready for a cold shower.

7.) Both are the sports of choice for French-Canadians.

6.) The first skill you have to master in each is the pick-up.

5.) Safety equipment is mandatory for all participants.

4.) Both can be spectator sports.

3.) Both involve a lot of leather, heavy breathing and aggression.

2.) Its best as a team sport; its not nearly as much fun playing alone.

1.) Its not how hard you shoot but how long you can play the game.

Knucks in tight for Adams division title

by Clark Luby
Underground Contributor

So what does it take to compete in the A-Division Ball Hockey league these days? Try guts and goaltending.

That's exactly what the third place Knucks have in goaltender Kevin Hunter.

For the second week in a row, a Knuck player has been named player of the week, the previous being centreman Jay Argyris. With team captain, Jerrod Bolvin on the shelf, the team definitely needs the motivation. Hunter managed to hold Roadkill, who had fourteen goals in their two previous games, to only one goal after facing dozens of shots, including three breakaways. Although scoring first early in the game, the Knucks couldn't hold the feisty Roadkill and managed a 1-1 tie. The tie leaves the Knucks 3rd place, 2 points behind the league leading Roadkill

"I didn't expect to be player of the week," says Hunter, "it's usually the high scorers who get the honours." Currently sporting a 1.67 goals against average, he has been the backbone of his team since last season. The Knucks moved from 'B'-Division this year and the transition hasn't been too tough on Hunter. " There's been a bit if a difference since we moved into the tougher league, better players, and a faster pace. Last year (1991) wasn't much of a challenge, we basically waltzed through 'B'-Division.

No kidding, that fancy three-steppin' included a shutout season. He couldn't have done it all by himself though, with Bill Monroe's SCUD missile slapshot and John Crossley anchoring the defense, Hunter has had a good supporting cast.

While it hasn't been easy so far, the Knucks should challenge for first place as long as Hunter doesn't do his best "Campbell-Conference-goalie-in-the-All-Star-game" imitation. But that leads to an entirely different story, maybe one that shouldn't be told.

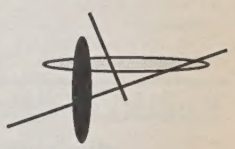
WISDOMS WORDS



I WOKE UP THE MORNING
AFTER THE NIGHT YOU HAD MURDERED LOVE.
THE BED WAS WET.
MY HEAD WAS WET.
A TEARDROP MIXED IN WITH THE SWEAT.

WE WERE PUSHING IT IN. AND PUSHING IT DEEP,
LIKE ANIMALS PLAYING A GAME WITHOUT RULES.
A RHINOCEROS HANGING IN A DOORWAY
WITH AN AQUA-VELVA MAN LOOK.
YOU GAVE ME IT. GAVE ME IT. GIVE MORE OF IT.

A DESERT ROSE ON A MOUNTAIN TOP.
LIKE ONE CHERRY ON A MATTERHORN.
I□M SITTING. WAITING. FOR YOU TO TURN BACK.
TO COUNT TO FIFTY. I M WAITING FOREVER.
PLAY IT IN REVERSE - THE HEAT BEING ABSORBED.
YOU GAVE ME IT. GAVE ME IT. GIVE MORE OF IT.
